

THE UNIVERSAL HOUSE OF JUSTICE

1989-11-20

1 dear b ahá'í friends,

2 1989 raising the question of your National Spiritual Assembly's relations with the government of guyana, and it has requested us to convey the 3 following.

in general, the manner in which the principle of noninterference in 4 political affairs should be applied in guyana depends upon your ap-78.3

81 17praisal of the situation. The subject should be discussed with the friends

82 in such a manner that they will not only understand its import for them-

83 selves, but will also see how they can positively and confidently explain it to non-b ahá'ís. The adherents of this cause uphold the principles

84 of loyalty and obedience to government, do not become involved in subversive activities, refrain from partisanship and do not join political 85 parties. At the same time, as responsible citizens, they strive to promote

86 the best interests of their respective nations and governments by making themselves productive, helpful members of society wholly committed to serving humanity for the love of god. Such considerations, while orient-

87 ing the bahá'ís to the attitudes they must adopt, should also allay the 88 fears and suspicions of their non-b ahá'í fellow citizens, regardless of their 89 political persuasions, concerning the outlook and intentions of the faith.

90 These attitudes should be neither offensive nor threatening to anyone. As the friends are seen increasingly to reflect them in their daily lives, they should gradually earn the respect and trust of all ranks and segments of society.

91 it is up to the National Spiritual Assembly to determine which posts and 92 functions are “diplomatic or political” and which are “purely administrative in character” and “under no circumstances are affected by the changes and chances that political activities and party government, in every land, must 93 necessarily involve.” while the former represent activities the friends must 94 avoid, the latter functions are open to bahá’ís. indeed, such functions are to 95 be welcomed by the friends as they constitute opportunities which enable them “to serve, in an unselfish, unostentatious and patriotic fashion, the 96 highest interests of the country” to which they belong. (The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh: Selected Letters, rev. ed. p. 65) 97 To throw oneself into the maelstrom of political struggles or to withdraw 98 utterly from any interest in the affairs of men outside the bahá’í community 99 are two extremes that must be avoided by every loyal bahá’í. The true course 100 is more difficult to follow, and requires wisdom and mature judgment. The general guidelines are given with great clarity by the beloved guardian in 101 “The golden Age of the cause of bahá’u’lláh,” and can be found on pages 64 to 67 of The World Order of Bahá’u’lláh. . . .

 65 The house of justice will offer its prayers at the holy Shrines for your 66 guidance and for the reinforcement of your devoted endeavors.
 67 with loving bahá’í greetings,
