To the pacific women's conference, 30 may–7 june 1991

1 one of the most encouraging developments, as a new millennium ap-2 proaches, is the speed at which women everywhere are arising to assume an equal part with men in the management of the affairs of humankind. for the bahá'í community this fundamental change in the role played by 3 women is a harbinger of the approach of global peace. only as the spiritual 4 and intellectual capacities which have found particularly vigorous expres-sion in women are able to exert their proper influence in the life of society will the conditions for lasting global reconciliation emerge.
5 for those who share this perception, no area of the world holds greater 6 promise than the nations of the pacific. Though for the most part small in 7 population and widely separated geographically, your island countries have demonstrated a steadily increasing capacity for creative response to the chal-8 lenges facing our planet. The bahá'í communities of this vast region feel a 9 deep sense of pride that they have been able to play a part in this spiritual 10 adventure.
11 be assured of our heartfelt prayers that the consultations on which you 12 are embarked will add another impulse to the irresistible process by which 109.6
